Editorial

We have, arguably, entered a time of unprecedented financial turmoil and it is interesting to sit back and observe the measures which are being taken in the hope of ending the crisis; often it would seem, in desperation.

Those of us who have invested money directly into the stock market have seen a substantial depletion in the value of our holdings, but we should remember that the market invariably returns to a level which surmounts its position prior to the fall. And, we neither lose nor do we profit from our holdings until we sell. Now is obviously not the time to sell. But those who have banked on a capital gain to support their income are likely to be in a parlous state.

We should therefore give some thought to those who have placed their trust in financial advisers. Advisers who in times of a rampant "Bull" have been able to claim and show large gains to their clients, for a fee, usually a percentage of the portfolio value. But, some times their performance is so dependant on a rising market that when the "Bull" becomes a "Bear" their clients are left with a much reduced portfolio and a continuing fee. And, where the financial adviser has relied on an increasing market to create regular payments for his or her clients, a rapidly diminishing capital base is the outcome. And, sadly this base is very unlikely to return to the position it held prior to the "crisis"; in the worst circumstance, it may collapse altogether.

Now to the measures being taken to get the economy moving.

Why bail out failures, be they corporate or individual? There is an old adage which says "never send good money after bad". True. Yet look at the good money that is being sent to support failing industries.

Also, what did we do with our $1,400? - David Jones? Myer? Bunnings? Liquor Land? or did we retire some debt? Whatever we did we should ask the question, how did it, in the long term, benefit the overall economy? I, for one can't see how it has made any difference at all.

Nevertheless this crisis has happened, and for once we can't level too much criticism at our political masters, but we can level some; the sleeping regulators. However the real dilemma is a product of the banking sector, exacerbated by the peripheral organisations which

Who was it that said, "Income one pound, spend nineteen shillings and eleven pence - happiness. Spend one pound and one penny - misery and the poorhouse". It doesn't matter who it was but we obviously have that lesson to relearn .

SO YOU ARE SMART!

Here are three questions. Answer them quickly without delay.

1. You are participating in a race....you overtake the second person. What position are you in?
2. If you overtake the last person, then you are...?
3. Do this one in your head, no pencil or calculator. - Take 1000 and add 40 to it. Now add another 1000. Now add 30. Add another 1000. Now add 20. Now add another 1000. Now add 10. What is the total?

Learmonth Airport

Exmouth Shire has abandoned controversial plans to rename the historic Learmonth Airport, with President Ronnie Fleay conceding this week that overwhelming opposition to the move meant the council had all but ruled it out.

The shire received more than 400 letters against the idea, with people outraged at plans to rename the town's airstrip Ningaloo Airport, to cash in on the tourism association with the famous reef.

The RAAF named Learmonth Airport in honour of WWII Wing-Cdr Charles Learmonth, after his death at the age of 26 whilst on a training flight in the notoriously dangerous Beaufort bomber.

HOLLYWOOD IN THE COMMUNITY

(With thanks to Katherine Filippi—Hollywood Private Hospital)

Hollywood Private Hospital maintains a strong relationship with its community, and has a very special connection with Hollywood Primary School. In late September, representatives from Hollywood Private Hospital attended the school's end of semester assembly. Hollywood Private Hospital was included in this occasion because the school wanted to thank them for their support over the years. Hollywood's association with the school extends back about 30 years. "Like any good neighbour we can call on Hollywood and they can call on us when either needs a helping hand," said Mr Graeme Browne, Principal of Hollywood Primary. "This relationship is a healthy one, based on friendship and reciprocity." Contribution to the community is one of Hollywood's core values. It's also something Principal Browne is very keen on.

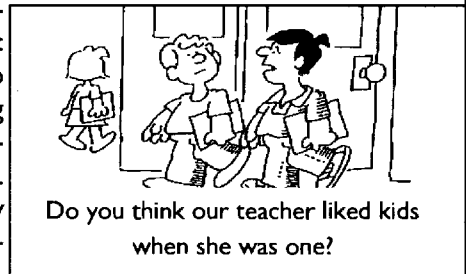

In recent years the school and the hospital have participated in several environmental activities, which have been driven mainly by the good services of Wayne Williams, Hollywood Private Hospital's Manager of Project Development &

Property Services. These environmental initiatives began when staff from Hollywood Private Hospital and staff and students from Hollywood Primary erected 16 bird boxes around the two campuses. The purpose of this program was to create a green corridor between Kings Park and Floreat, providing birds with a safe passage. Students now visit the hospital on an annual basis to pot native plants. In turn the hospital has sent over their gardeners to advise the school on their reticulation systems. Hollywood Private Hospital has also donated money for plants and sports equipment. The school children visit the hospital regularly. The school choir performs annually at the hospital's Remembrance Day ceremony, as well as singing carols to patients at Christmas.

Graeme Browne recounts a story that demonstrates the tight knit relationship that the two Hollywoods have with one another: "Several years ago we decided to beautify the school. We were going to landscape the front entrance, putting in a hedge and water fountain. This turned out to be an enormously expensive exercise." "A major expense was the electrical work. It was going to cost us between $1500 and $2000 to get the electrician to connect the power from the school to the water feature. So I gave Wayne Williams a ring and he told me not to worry about it that he'd send over the electrician. Our gardener dug the hole and Hollywood Private Hospital's electrician put in the power. The whole exercise cost us nothing."

Principal Browne is on the hospital's Consumer Council, which meets four times a year. "I was a mystery patient for the consumer council," he explained. "It was a lot of fun and I hopefully gave some positive feedback to the hospital." This neighbourly relationship is a testament to that fact that working together can ultimately lead to creating happier and healthier communities.
